Thomas is searching for a place called home.

When Thomas Knight's life takes a turn from what he expected, he wanders the streets, seeking companionship from the homeless, visiting their shelters, wondering if he is as foolish as Esau who sold his birthright for a bowl of soup. Until he meets Gloria. And a three-year commitment to the Lord is challenged—a commitment that might just change his life.

Gloria Seely thinks she might be saving Thomas's life when she finds him standing on a creek bank where a homeless man almost died. After getting to know Thomas, she's tempted to break her vow of giving up men entirely. However, she soon discovers he isn't at all who or what she thought, and she may be the one who needs saving.

Can love put down roots when the truth is revealed?
