Shown in this state-of-the-art survey are the latest, most innovative ways designers are working with typography based on the astounding new technology available today. Sixteen actual projects drawn from a wide range of markets show how the computer has enabled designers to custom-tailor fonts as an integral part of an overall layout, allowing them to convey the characteristics of a given brand in dynamic new ways.

Yolanda Zappaterra, the author of Illustration, another title in this series, and a journalist who writes for several design magazines, including Design Week and Graphics International, lives in London.
